BIO

Sara Beate Eira is a producer and filmmaker. Her work explores psychological themes relating to her experience as an Indigenous Sámi Woman.

In 2009 she was the director of the Sami Film Festival and later that year she became the youngest ever Editor in Chief of Ávvir, the only Sámi-language daily news publication. She has been a core contributor to the joint Sámi Parliament and Norwegian governments preparation for the Truth and Reconciliation Commission, and has worked with youth in the Sami Pathfinders Program, combatting racism and prejudice. She was hired as the script supervisor for Ole Giæver and Mer Films' feature film Ellos Eatnu (Let the river flow), and soon became a part of the core team. She has been involved in the editing process and is also strategizing pre-launch marketing.. Sara has also contributed to the Fenomen Film, Rein Film and NRK drama series Vi lover et helvete (We promise hell), as script consultant and translator. Sara is a mother of four and lives in Guovdageaidnu, in the Norwegian Arctic.

Screaming Fox Productions brings stories to light that the mainstream Sámi media has avoided. We make films for the Sámi people, by the Sámi people—and content for other audiences with an Indigenous perspective in mind. Our work remains accessible, uniting people by showing the diversity and complexity of human experience. Sámi people have stories that need to be told. They are stories of bravery and humility, romance and intellect. They are stories that call from the dark.
